BULLETIN
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 31—Gen. Henri Honore Giraud today was appointed commander-in-chief of all French forces in the Mediterranean area. Gen. Charles de Gaulle was named president of the Council of National Defense.

By International News Service
The Allies turned the heat on Italy today to help that unhappy nation decide whether it wants peace or war.

From land, sea and air, Allied forces hammered home heavy blows on Sicily and southern Italy in what may be the final all-out drive to bring about the unconditional surrender demanded by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Three more Italian islands off the northwestern tip of Sicily, Favignana, Levanzo and Marettimo, have yielded to the unconditional surrender terms, an official communique from Allied headquarters in North Africa revealed today. While these islands are not important in themselves, their surrender was significant evidence of the trend of events in Italy.

Allied cruisers bombarded and destroyed a number of bridges near Locri on the eastern side of the Italian "toe" on Wednesday, it was later disclosed today.

Americans Advance
Meanwhile, the American seventh army pushed inexorably forward in its two-pronged drive against axis forces falling back into the northeastern corner of Sicily and Allied planes bombed and strafed the few remaining important enemy objectives on the island.

From the Rome radio came the announcement that Count Galeazzo Ciano, son-in-law of former Premier Benito Mussolini, had resigned as ambassador to the Vatican, but it was not clear whether he had resigned under pressure or voluntarily.

Ciano has been regarded as more friendly to the Allies than his ousted father-in-law, but as a high-ranking Fascist he is probably unacceptable to the Allies as a peacemaker.

The Ruhr valley industrial city of Renscheid was blasted in great strength early today by strong forces of the Royal Air Force as the mighty new cycle of aerial assaults against the Reich was carried into its eighth day.

Allies Facing Major Problem In Bringing Axis Chiefs To Trial

WASHINGTON, July 31—The United Nations face major legal difficulties in the proposal to bring Benito Mussolini, Premier Tojo and Adolf Hitler, and their henchmen, to trial for war guilt, authoritative Washington sources said today.

Opinion as to the methods of trial are widely divergent among authorities on international law in the United Nations and no decision has yet been made as to how or when any of the Axis leaders will be brought to trial.

The question of the type of court before which the Axis leaders, when caught, will be tried, what laws they can be tried under, and when their trials might be held was brought to the forefront by President Roosevelt's declaration yesterday that Mussolini and "his gang" will be brought to trial.

Inquiry in government circles brought the statement that no method for trial had been decided.

Not Yet In Accord
Furthermore, it was learned, the Allied nations are not yet in complete accord on how the Axis leaders should be tried.

In view of President Roosevelt's utterances the United Nations may write into the treaty of peace, ending World War II, a provision for the creation of an international court of high justice for trial of war criminals.

Since a treaty of peace must be ratified not only by the winning nations but by the losing countries, such a provision would create a "court of law" mentioned by the President. The treaty, too, could establish rules for the conduct of the trials of war criminals.

British quarters have advocated trial by military court martial and the carrying out of sentence on the spot when Allied armies invade the various Axis countries.

Court Martial Favored
They argue that the Axis war criminals are guilty of war crimes, therefore military crimes, and should be tried before military courts. In this view, if the trials are delayed for several years, and the Axis leaders are held for civil trial, they may never be brought to justice.

American government opinion seems to lean toward withholding the trials until after the end of the war. Then, according to this plan, an international court would be named with members and jury from the aggrieved United Nations, who would adjudge the war guilt of the Axis leaders and their henchmen.

Proposals were made during World War I to bring Kaiser Wilhelm and other war makers to trial. After the war no trials were ever held. Wilhelm fled to haven in Holland where he remained until he died a few years ago.

City Milk Goes Higher Sunday
Advance To 14 Cents A Quart Announced By Local Dairies

Circleville housewives will start Sunday to pay 14 cents a quart for milk, local distributors being granted permission to raise the ceiling from 13 to 14 cents effective August 1.

All distributors handling pasteurized products will put the raise into effect. Included are Circle City Dairy, Blue Ribbon Dairy and Ringgold Farms Dairy.

Milk distributors pointed out that the ceiling boost was permitted when OPA took into consideration that there is no ceiling on the price paid to farmers by manufacturers of milk products. Local dealers claimed that unless they were permitted to pay more to producers that all available supplies would be sold manufacturers.

The OPA had court papers restraining Norman from using his book and ordering him to appear in federal court to tell why his book should not be suspended.

YANKEES TURN FIRE THROWERS ON JAPANESE

Tanks Also Employed As Americans Advance In Drive On Munda

ENEMY SHIPPING HIT

Liberators Ignore Foul Weather And Plaster Base At Salamaua

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, July 31—American troops, employing tanks and flame throwers, moved forward in a general advance today on the Jap-held Munda air base on New Georgia island in the Solomons.

The flame-throwers and tanks were thrown into action on the southern flank as the Allies increased their pressure in that sector. On the northern flank, the Allies repulsed a counter-attack.

Meanwhile, light Allied naval forces struck at Japanese shipping in the Vitiaz straits off New Guinea and destroyed seven supply-laden barges.

Despite the worst weather that has prevailed in New Guinea in many weeks, four-motored American Liberator bombers again blasted the important Japanese base at Salamaua, while ground fighting continued in the Komiatum-mout Tambu area and northwest of Tambu bay. Twenty-five tons of bombs were dropped in the Salamaua area, but results could not be observed because of the poor visibility.

Weak Jap Attacks
Japanese dive-bombers made light, ineffective raids on Allied positions in the Bodubi area and at Tambu bay. Half a dozen enemy bombers, covered by an unusually large force of 19 fighters, also bombed and strafed the Garoka area, but failed to achieve any substantial results.

The use of flame-throwers in the bitter fighting taking place in the dense jungles of New Georgia was the first reported by the Allies since the successful campaign against Buna in New Guinea. The Japanese are making a determined though hopeless fight for this strategically important base and it is evident that Gen. MacArthur is overlooking no bet in his drive to capture it.

American bombers were active yesterday over New Britain, New Guinea, the Solomon Islands and other Nipponese island outposts in the Southwest Pacific.

One formation of heavy bombers protected by a strong fighter escort attacked the Ballale air-drome on Bougainville island in the Northern Solomons, setting fires which rose 200 feet high. Twenty-five enemy fighters were encountered in the area, but for some inexplicable reason they avoided battle.

Medium bombers raided enemy shipping off the coast of Cape Gloucester between Borgen bay and Cape Busching, bombing and strafing barge concentrations and shore installations. At least four Jap barges were definitely destroyed and many others were damaged or destroyed.

Allied torpedo and dive-bombers also hammered enemy installations at Gasmata on New Britain, but the results could not be observed because of adverse weather.

SPAIN REPORTS GREAT CONVOY OF ALLIED SHIPS
LONDON, July 31—A new fleet of 147 Allied merchant ships passed through the Straits of Gibraltar yesterday, the Spanish radio said today in an unconfirmed report recorded by Reuters.

The convoyed vessels were strongly escorted by warships, it was said.

The ship movements reportedly were effected in two groups. The initial fleet consisted of 107 merchantmen. Later, an additional 40, entered the Mediterranean without calling at Gibraltar, it was said.

Deputy Sheriff Finds Boy Of 10 Touring County Roads

Deputy Sheriff Vern Pontious was called to try to find a missing tractor and when the farm equipment was found it was discovered that a 10-year-old Harrison township lad had been joy riding on it.

The tractor was taken from the property of Jacob Caldwell, who lives near the Pickaway Inn in northern Harrison township.

The youth, Delano Kellough, whose father farms for Caldwell, had been touring all roads of the district including Route 23, and had forced several motorists to go off the road.

No damage was done to the tractor, and no complaint was brought against the child. The tractor and its operator were finally located when the little boy drove it to a filling station and asked to have the radiator checked for water, and also asked whether there was any "extra" gasoline available.

ARMY DIVIDED ON EFFECT OF DUCE'S OUSTER

PALERMO, Sicily, July 26 (Delayed)—Opinion is divided among American army officers over the effects of Mussolini's resignation which, it is generally agreed, was in no sense voluntary, but the result of a military and possibly revolutionary coup.

One small group of Americans thinks that the Italian officers who are loyal to Marshal Pietro Badoglio may continue to fight strenuously if the new premier demands further resistance. The majority, however, believe that the collapse of Italy is certain to occur shortly and even predict that Badoglio will ask for peace in a short time. They feel that Mussolini's resignation shows the war is "about over as far as Italy is concerned."

Some of them said: "Hitler will have to write off the reinforcements he sent to Sicily before Mussolini's ouster, which he apparently did not anticipate. We expect Hitler to withdraw to a line north of the Po river or even beyond the Brenner pass and wash his hands of the whole business."

MARINES OFFER PAY FOR CHANCE TO RAID WAKE

SEVENTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS IN THE PACIFIC, July 30—(Delayed)—A Marine captain offered $1,000 and others offered a month's pay for the opportunity to take part in last Sunday's raid on Wake island.

That was the story told today by Col. William J. Holzapfel, Jr., of Racine, Wis., commander of a task group.

Holzapfel said that a Liberator tail-gunner, stricken with appendicitis, knew there were plenty of Marines who were eager to take over his assignment. He received many applications for his berth and finally the names were put into a hat.

Sgt. William C. Campbell of Denver, Col., won the draw, whereupon he received many cash offers to sell his seat as substitute tail-gunner, including a flat offer of $1,000. He refused them all, took part in the raid and shot down a Jap zero near the target. He also engaged several other Zeros in combat and confirmed the destruction of two planes shot down by other flyers, thereby enhancing his usefulness and showing the complete cooperation that exists between all fighting services at the fighting front.

Holzapfel related how a single Liberator was lost during the two raids on Wake in the last week.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Kiernan

Well, the War Food Administration says that there will be 20 percent less butter for us next year and it will go hard with the man who butters his toast on both sides.

We once asked a man who buttered his toast on both sides why he did it.

His answer was brief and beautiful.

"My lower teeth like butter too," he snarled.

It's a good thing for us that gasoline and butter do not mix. Else OPA would be telling us how to use the butter after we got it.

"Pleasure buttering is out," they would say. "You may have a quarter pound a week for essential bread smearing, but anyone found greasing up corn on the cob will have his butter knife picked up for the duration."

That would be rationing on top of rationing. It doesn't make sense but we've had a year of it with gasoline.

Thought for the day: We'll still be butter off than Mussolini.

OIL REPORT OF BYRNES DELAYED

Easing Of East Coast Ban On Pleasure Driving Expected Soon

WASHINGTON, July 31—The petroleum report being prepared by War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes will be delayed a week and thus cause a corresponding setback in the time when the East coast pleasure driving ban can be lifted, it was learned today.

Officials in all the government agencies concerned are agreed, however, that the easing of the ban will be announced "in two or three weeks."

High government sources declared that the Byrnes study, originally planned for completion early next week, cannot be expected until August 8 at the earliest, because of difficulties encountered in estimating future military and naval war needs.

The study, first comprehensive investigation of the petroleum situation since the emergency, will also explore the possibility of scaling down army and navy needs, to bring them into line with storage capacity and overseas transportation equipment.

This phase of the study, it was stated, was instigated by Office of Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman, whose objective is to obtain larger petroleum allotments for essential civilian needs.

Government spokesmen asserted that the delay in lifting the pleasure driving ban has occurred because the over-all petroleum rationing policy committee does not plan to recommend increased gasoline allotments for the East until the Byrnes report is at hand.

OPA officials asserted that their policy will be to partially restore gasoline rationing coupon cuts in the East coast shortage area, while reducing values in areas east of the Rocky mountains, in conformance with the "equalization" program previously outlined by Petroleum Administrator Ickes.

FLEEING THIEF

BUMPS SOLDIER;

NEW YORK, July 31—Commando tactics in New York's bustling garment center were responsible for capture of a payroll thief, police revealed today.

Justified by Joseph Roy Montgomery, of New Orleans, who was running away with a $2,200 payroll satchel, police said, Pvt. James E. Stokesbury, of Seymour, Conn., in his own words: "Gave him a hip-mare and a wrist-lock and down he went."

Pvt. Stokesbury who is technically on sick leave, didn't explain what a "hip-mare" was, but wrestling fans remembering the famous "flying mare" of Man Mountain Dean, winced painfully.

Italian Troops In Greece Reported Disarmed On Hitler's Order

BULLETIN
LONDON, July 31—Yugoslav circles in London reported today that the Fifth and Sixth brigades of Gen. Draja Mihailovitch's Slovene partisans have broken through Italian lines and reached the Udine region of northern Italy.

Patriot forces have stirred up the Slovene inhabitants of this area, it was said, and many have joined the Mihailovitch forces. Fighting between Slovenes and Italians on Italian soil has been reported previously, but never so far south as Udine.

BULLETIN
BERNE, Switzerland, July 31—The death toll of Fascists killed by peace rioters in Milan in demonstrations against Marshal Pietro Badoglio's failure to sign an immediate peace with the Allies rose to 700 today.

Seemingly reliable reports from across the Italian border said that Badoglio's troops had met only with moderate success in their efforts to wipe out disorders and put an end to a virtual general strike which tied up Milan's great war industries.

LONDON, July 31—Possibility

Nazi Germany may utilize alleged

"Communist uprisings" in Italy as an excuse for full-scale military occupation before Marshal Pietro

Badoglio signs peace with the Allies was seen today in a flood of ominous dispatches reaching London.

As all signs pointed to a momentous break within the next few hours that may take Italy out of the war or else turn the peninsula into a bloody battlefield, there were numerous signs that Adolf Hitler may have decided to seize the country and transform it into the arena of a showdown fight to save Germany itself from early invasion.

Radio broadcasts from Berlin and dispatches circulated by the official Nazi DNE news agency emphasized the spread of Communist demonstrations throughout Italy.

Developments came fast as a decision by the Italian government on the honorable peace offered by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower appeared near.

Flood of Rumors

The latest flood of rumors and reports included:

1. A report that the Nazis were seizing control of all northern Italy.

2. Reports that German troops were disarming Italian soldiers in Greece.

3. German consuls were said to have advised German residents in Italy to leave for their homes immediately.

4. Unconfirmed rumors spread through London that an armistice with Italy will be signed tomorrow.

5. A political commentator of the Berlin radio said that "the coming week may bring about extremely important developments for us and the European continent."

The reports from the Middle East concerning disarming of Italian troops indicated a German determination to prevent Badoglio from reclaiming Italian soldiers in occupied territories prior to signing of an armistice.

No Peace Overture

Official London said that no overture has been received as yet from Badoglio and it appears that he is stalling despite the popular clamor for peace in an attempt to prevent Italy from becoming a battleground and secure the return of some 30 Italian divisions in the Balkans and 270,000 Italian workers from Germany.

"My lower teeth like butter too," he snarled.

It's a good thing for us that gasoline and butter do not mix. Else OPA would be telling us how to use the butter after we got it.

"Pleasure buttering is out," they would say. "You may have a quarter pound a week for essential bread smearing, but anyone found greasing up corn on the cob will have his butter knife picked up for the duration."

That would be rationing on top of rationing. It doesn't make sense but we've had a year of it with gasoline.

Thought for the day: We'll still be butter off than Mussolini.

OIL REPORT OF BYRNES DELAYED

Easing Of East Coast Ban On Pleasure Driving Expected Soon

WASHINGTON, July 31 — The petroleum report being prepared by War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes will be delayed a week and thus cause a corresponding setback in the time when the East coast pleasure driving ban can be lifted, it was learned today.

Officials in all the government agencies concerned are agreed, however, that the easing of the ban will be announced "in two or three weeks."

High government sources declared that the Byrnes study, originally planned for completion early next week, cannot be expected until August 8 at the earliest, because of difficulties encountered in estimating future military and naval war needs.

The study, first comprehensive investigation of the petroleum situation since the emergency, will also explore the possibility of scaling down army and navy needs, to bring them into line with storage capacity and overseas transportation equipment.

This phase of the study, it was stated, was instigated by Office of Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman, whose objective is to obtain larger petroleum allotments for essential civilian needs.

Government spokesmen asserted that the delay in lifting the pleasure driving ban has occurred because the over-all petroleum rationing policy committee does not plan to recommend increased gasoline allotments for the East until the Byrnes report is at hand. OPA officials asserted that their policy will be to partially restore gasoline rationing coupon cuts in the East coast shortage area, while reducing values in areas east of the Rocky mountains, in conformance with the "equalization" program previously outlined by Petroleum Administrator Ickes.

FLEEING THIEF BUMPS SOLDIER; FLIGHT AT END

NEW YORK, July 31 — Commando tactics in New York's bustling garment center were responsible for capture of a payroll thief, police revealed today. Jostled by Joseph Roy Montgomery, of New Orleans, who was running away with a $2,200 payroll satchel, police said, Pvt. James E. Stokesbury, of Seymour, Conn., in his own words: "Gave him a hip-mare and a wrist-lock and down he went."

Pvt. Stokesbury who is technically on sick leave, didn't explain what a "hip-mare" was, but wrestling fans remembering the famous "flying mare" of Man Mountain Dean, winced painfully.

Italian Troops In Greece Reported Disarmed On Hitler's Order

BULLETIN
LONDON, July 31—Yugoslav circles in London reported today that the Fifth and Sixth brigades of Gen. Draja Mihailovitch's Slovene partisans have broken through Italian lines and reached the Udine region of northern Italy.

Patriot forces have stirred up the Slovene inhabitants of this area, it was said, and many have joined the Mihailovitch forces.

Fighting between Slovenes and Italians on Italian soil has been reported previously, but never so far south as Udine.

BULLETIN
BERNE, Switzerland, July 31 —The death toll of Fascists killed by peace rioters in Milan in demonstrations against Marshal Pietro Badoglio's failure to sign an immediate peace with the Allies rose to 700 today. Seemingly reliable reports from across the Italian border said that Badoglio's troops had met only with moderate success in their efforts to wipe out disorders and put an end to a virtual general strike which tied up Milan's great war industries.

LONDON, July 31—Possibility Nazi Germany may utilize alleged "Communist uprisings" in Italy as an excuse for full-scale military occupation before Marshal Pietro Badoglio signs peace with the Allies was seen today in a flood of ominous dispatches reaching London.

As all signs pointed to a momentous break within the next few hours that may take Italy out of the war or else turn the peninsula into a bloody battlefield, there were numerous signs that Adolf Hitler may have decided to seize the country and transform it into the arena of a showdown fight to save Germany itself from early invasion.

Radio broadcasts from Berlin and dispatches circulated by the official Nazi DNB news agency emphasized the spread of Communist demonstrations throughout Italy.

Developments came fast as a decision by the Italian government on the honorable peace offered by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower appeared near.

Flood of Rumors

The latest flood of rumors and reports included:

1. A report that the Nazis were seizing control of all northern Italy.

2. Reports that German troops were disarming Italian soldiers in Greece.

3. German consuls were said to have advised German residents in Italy to leave for their homes immediately.

4. Unconfirmed rumors spread through London that an armistice with Italy will be signed tomorrow.

5. A political commentator of the Berlin radio said that "the coming week may bring about extremely important developments for us and the European continent."

The reports from the Middle East concerning disarming of Italian troops indicated a German determination to prevent Badoglio from reclaiming Italian soldiers in occupied territories prior to signing of an armistice.

No Peace Overture
Official London said that no overture has been received as yet from Badoglio and it appears that he is stalling despite the popular clamor for peace in an attempt to prevent Italy from becoming a battleground and secure the return of some 30 Italian divisions in the Balkans and 270,000 Italian workers from Germany.

straits to northern France. German anti-aircraft batteries on the French coast sent up a heavy barrage.

Remscheid, south of the Ruhr river and east of bomb-pocked Dusseldorf, is the center of the German machine tool industry.

The assault by hundreds of block-buster carrying British bombers cost the R. A. F. 15 planes. Two aircraft of the fighter command were lost in night operations.

Speedy light Mosquito bombers, Beaufighters and intruder patrols attacked airfields and railway targets in France and Holland while the big bombers were over the Reich.

The weather over Remscheid was clear and the attack was well concentrated, the official air ministry communique said.

The attack was the first of the war on Remscheid. The largest industrial plant there is the Alexanderwerke which makes special machinery for the chemical industry, motor components and small arms. This factory employs nearly 3,000 persons and covers 75 acres. Some 25 other factories are located in the city of about 107,000 population.

Fairly large railway repair shops also are located in Remscheid.

It was estimated that more than 1,000 British, American and German planes engaged in furious battles over the continent Friday.

The American forces which blasted the assembly plant for Nazi Fockewulf fighters and dive-bombers at Kassel were escorted out toward the target by U. S. Thunderbolts and the American craft accounted for the destruction of at least 52 German planes which attempted interception.

Russ Move Ahead

Russian forces pounding toward Orel from three directions were disclosed today to have gained from two and a half to six miles more, liberated another 20 inhabited localities and slain more than 6,000 Nazis.

At the same time, however, the Soviet high command revealed that the Germans had launched a new drive of their own in the Donets basin, attacking with large forces of tanks and infantry southwest of Voroshilovgrad.

All of the Nazi attacks were declared to have been repulsed with heavy losses. In addition 14 enemy planes were blasted out of the sky.

The Germans also launched counter-attacks north of Orel, using tank-supported infantry and planes, but the Soviets threw the enemy back beyond his original positions. One strongly fortified Nazi stronghold was captured and 800 Nazis killed when the counter-drive boomeranged.

The American Seventh army and Canadian units to the south thrust deeper today into the Nazi-held Etna line defenses in north-east Sicily.

Two columns of the American army pressed eastward against the enemy-occupied Messina bridgehead, one along the north on the coast road skirting the Tyrrhenian sea toward San Stefano, northern anchor of the Nazi line, and the other jabbed forward inland from captured Nicosia.

The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio said that Allied naval and air forces joined with artillery batteries along the north coast to hammer the road leading into San Stefano.

Headquarters announced officially that the Seventh Army under command of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., advanced on several sectors. Canadian units still further south who overran Leonforte and Agira in the center of the German defenses moved ahead against stern opposition.

The British Eighth army is assembled before the east coast port of Catania awaiting a further advance by the Americans and Canadians to loose the final assault to oust the enemy from the Messina bridgehead.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters said that the Eighth army was maintaining strong patrol activity on the Catania front to feel out the Nazi defenses there.

FIVE TEACHERS QUIT COUNTY SCHOOL STAFF

With the August 1 resignation deadline at hand for school teachers, George D. McDowell, Pickaway county school superintendent, reported Saturday that five more teachers who had been contracted by Pickaway county boards for the 1943-44 term have resigned in the last 24 hours to take new jobs. The five additional resignations make a total of 16 to fill prior to the opening of school, with a possibility existing that notice may be received from others during the week end.

Two more men charged with intoxication awaited hearings Saturday before Mayor Ben H. Gordon while two others gained their freedom after posting bonds of $10 each. In jail were Henry Fyffe, Pickaway township, and Charles Hutchinson, South Scioto street; freed on bond were William Hiles and Shirley Brown, both of near Circleville.

TOWERS CASE APPEALED

Pan-American Airways, Miami, Fla., filed a notice of appeal Saturday from the Pickaway county Selective Service board's I-A classification assigned John William Towers of Circleville, an employee of the company. The Airways Co. seeks an occupational deferment for Towers, a son of Dr. and Mrs. O. J. Towers.

KINGSTON

The 4-A Farm Bureau study group held its annual July picnic supper Sunday evening on the spacious lawn at the country home of Mrs. Wood Immell, with Margaret and John Alfred Immell assisting their mother.

Guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Keeler, Mrs. Donald Whitel and son Robert Howard, Miss Marie Poole of Chillicothe, Mr. and Mrs. Milt Warren of Circleville, Mrs. S. C. Lightner, Messrs. Monroe Senff, William Ashbrook, Frank Sharp, Sam Sharp and John Wright. Members present were Mr. and Mrs. Price Ashbrook, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Corcoran and son Andrew, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cryder, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Cryder, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Gower, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Long, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Orr and children Marcus, Thoburn, Evelyn and Lowell.

Miss June Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Flenders and two sons of Cincinnati and Private Ralph Minser of Camp Butler, North Carolina, were guests from Thursday until Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Minser.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Culp and daughter of Springfield were weekend guests of Mrs. Irene Minser and children. Gloria Minser accompanied her uncle and aunt home to make an indefinite visit.

AT CIRCLEVILLE THEATRES

ABOVE is a dramatic sequence in "I Walked with a Zombie", a tale of living dead, with Frances Dee, Tom Conway, James Ellison and Christine Gordon, which is part of a double bill with "The Leopard Man" opening Sunday at the Grand theatre for a three day run.

ANN Miller and John Hubbard are shown in a scene from "What's Buzzin', Cousin", the Cliftona theatre's Sunday, Monday and Tuesday picture. Also in the cast are Rochester of the Jack Benny radio show and Freddy Martin's band.

"CHATTERBOX", starring Judy Canova and Joe E. Brown, and "Arizona Bound", with Buck Jones and Tim McCoy are the Circle theatre's week end pictures.

BOYS NEEDED TO ASSIST IN SCRAP DRIVE

Twenty Circleville youngsters who want to help take a crack at Hitler, Hirohito et al are asked to be at police headquarters at 8:30 a. m. Monday to assist the city service department in the scrap collection program.

The youths should be at least 12 years of age.

In addition to the satisfaction they will gain from helping collect scrap, they will also be presented theatre passes for their work.

FIRE HYDRANT BROKEN

A fire hydrant at Pickaway and Ohio streets was broken off Friday evening by an automobile which backed against the plug, then was driven away. Ohio Water Service Co. crews were called to stop the flow of water.

USE STAMP STOLEN

Ben Chilcote of Circleville reported to police Saturday that the federal automobile use tax stamp had been taken from his automobile.

will be lost and a decision may be forthcoming immediately.

The Germans were reported to have seized all telephonic and telegraphic offices in northern Italy and began to censor messages heavily in a determined effort to prevent leakages of movements by their troops through the Brenner pass.

From Madrid came word that German reinforcements were streaming into northern Italy and the Istrian peninsula where the Nazis are swiftly extending their grip on strategic points. Hitler's armed forces were said to have taken up positions at strategic bridges, passes and road junctions in an apparent effort to gain complete control.

At numerous positions taken over, it was said, the Nazis immediately set up machine-gun nests and mortar batteries.

The Germans were said to have entered certain northern ports to guard Italian submarines, and their crews who have been confined to their vessels until German crews reportedly en route can take charge.

The Algiers radio said it received an unconfirmed rumor that Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio was insisting on the withdrawal of troops from northern Italy. This followed earlier reports that Badoglio had asked Hans George Von Mackensen, the Nazi ambassador to Rome, to send 40 German divisions to defend all Italy. The Nazis apparently were willing to send troops to defend a northern line along the Po river, but dared not risk sending forces into threatened southern Italy.

Broadcasting in Italian, the Algiers radio warned the Italian people that Badoglio must make peace quickly under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's terms if he wants Italy to survive.

"The sands are running out," said radio Algiers.

"If Badoglio forgets his duty the time has come for the Italian people to show they have really regained their freedom."

Await Developments

Officials of Allied governments meanwhile stood by in London in expectation that some break would come over the week end in the form of an answer to Gen. Eisenhower's appeal to the Italians to lay down their arms and cease assistance to the Germans.

Although there as yet has been no official move toward an armistice, rumors were widespread that the Italians had begun preliminary negotiations. Some quarters suggested that this was in part responsible for the sudden meeting of the British cabinet in the wee hours of yesterday morning.

The situation in Italy, as far as could be determined from seepage of reports across the Swiss frontier, remained much the same, with groups parading in demonstrations for peace while others stomped on for two decades by the Fascists, continued to seek revenge.

One infuriated crowd reportedly stormed the Cellari prison at Milan and released hundreds of political prisoners. Renewed outbreaks of violence in Milan were said to have resulted in 200 further casualties in the mounting toll of dead and injured.

SMART RAILWAY
"SOME fine day," said the returned traveler, "some really smart railway man will take a good look at the map of the U. S. A. and will design something different. He will probably be a returned army engineer who has gone through himself and has seen other people, not so strong as he, enduring the miseries of changing trains in Chicago just enough times. He will know about clover leaves and how to avoid cities and — being an American army engineer—nothing will be impossible to him."

"So he will sit down to his drafting board and draw a railroad. It will have roughly oval or curvingly triangular cloverleaves at its eastern and western ends. The passenger from Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco or Los Angeles can get into his car at his home town and can choose whether he will get off at Portland, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, or wherever, and he will not have to change cars once. His closed curve at one end will lead gently out to the big straight, and into a closed curve at the other end."

"The Up railway and the Down railway, the Glacier View and the PDQ and all the rest can go their old ways and carry the short-trip traffic. But the new railway will have only modern trains and it will get the through passengers and all their blessings. Because it will never touch Chicago."

"DEAD CAPITALISM"
GENERAL Francisco Franco, the Spanish dictator, tells a big gathering of workmen belonging to his "Falange" party that a time will come when his government will provide "a just distribution of earnings and profits." He defends the right of property, he says, but also proclaims that property has duties to perform. He reminds his listeners of the natural lack of equality among men, resulting from their different gifts and aptitudes.

All this sounds fair and true, but would be more convincing if the Spanish dictator had not risen to power by terror, cruelty and slaughter, even as Hitler and Mussolini did. Free nations, believing in democracy and the natural rights of man, cannot trust this now waning breed of supermen.

"The liberal-capitalist system in Spain is dead forever," proclaims Franco. We shall see about that, as the liberation of enslaved nations proceeds. Spaniards under their harsh dictatorship must look longingly to the greater freedom and opportunity of their blood brethren in Central and South America. Free capitalism may be no more dead than human liberty.

Books, like people, may tell you things that ain't so—but not so often.

Does Japan Now Seek Peace Between Germans, Russians? End of Nazi-Russ Warfare Would Benefit Nipponese
By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist
● WASHINGTON—Reports that Tokyo is trying to get Russia and Germany upon a peace basis continue afloat in Washington.
That the Japs are making the attempt is considered a reasonable possibility, though doubts are expressed that the Mikado's advisers are optimistic enough to believe they stand much chance of success at it.
Still, it is recognized that a suspension of Nazi-Soviet hostilities would be enormously to the islanders' advantage. Some observers surmise that perhaps their diplomats have put out a few feelers simply experimentally. If so, according to Joseph C. Grew, formerly our ambassador at Nippon's capital, it is not a real peace that they are angling for, but only a "phony" one.
However, it is accepted as a safe conclusion that they will not attain even the "phony" kind.
Herr Hitler, to be sure, from all accounts, would be readily acquiescent.
True, Hitler attacked Comrade Stalin's folk when he did not need to. Josef was neither doing nor saying anything threatening at the time. The United Nations' strategists have been puzzled ever since to account for Adolf's sudden thrust at the Russians, thus unnecessarily lining them up with the anti-Axis people.
The general verdict is that it was an error of judgment on his part. Hitler has always been hostile to the Russian regime, anyway. Democrats previously had classed the Reds pretty much with Nazis, Fascists and Falangists, but these three groups all along have had the anti-Communist as well as the anti-democratic complex.
While taking the warpath against the democracies, the Fuehrer presumably deemed it desirable to make his campaign Communist-inclusive, getting the whole thing over in short order, which he obviously thought he and the rest of the Axis could do, if they struck abruptly.
Incidentally, Russia is rich in resources, and the Nazi potentate

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
By DREW PEARSON
CHURCHILL STERN
WASHINGTON—Inside fact is that President Roosevelt's fireside radio talk was sent to Churchill in advance for his OK and approval. Churchill's talk before the House of Commons, however, was not sent to Washington in advance.
If it had been, tactful suggestions might have been made to tone down the "seared, scarred and blackened" threats, since U. S. policy is not to be harsh with the Italian people now that they have kicked out Mussolini. Italians, unfortunately, are extremely suspicious of England, think she wants to keep certain Mediterranean islands, Pantelleria, perhaps Sicily.
The man who prompted Roosevelt to rebuff the OWI for calling Victor Emmanuel a "moronic little king" was Admiral Leahy. He hot-footed it over to the White House immediately, warned the President there was no use heaping abuse on the new Italian government until it had a chance to act.
Trouble was that OWI's broadcasts have been operated by a group of well-meaning Italian exiles who are so close to the situation they don't see the over-all, long-range picture.

OVER-ALL COMMITTEE
The above hemming and hawing over Italy points to the importance of the new Italo-American steering committee recently organized in New York under such leading citizens as Judge Ferdinand Pecora of the New York Supreme Court, Judge Felix Forte of Boston, Judge D'Allesandroni of Philadelphia, Generoso Pope, editor of Il Progresso, Congressman D'Allesandro of Baltimore, Dr. A. H. Giannini of San Francisco, James Montana of Buffalo and many others.

This committee represents Italo-Americans from all political groups—Democrats and Republicans, some with Fascist leanings before Pearl Harbor, some bitterly anti-Fascist—but all united now to do two things: (1) take Italy out of the war immediately; (2) save Italy from the mistakes of a Giraud-De Gaulle cat-and-dog fight.

When this group met in New York, Dr. Charles Fama, head of the Medical Board, New York City Retirement system, had not spoken for years to Luigi Antonini, head of the Italian-American Labor Council. But they shook hands and pledged to work together to take Italy immediately out of the war and prevent political bickering over Italy's future government, as among the French.

MOVE TOWARD DEMOCRACY
Long-sighted U. S. officials regard this Italo-American move as one of the most broad-gauged steps taken so far toward early peace and toward healing European wounds. They recognize that we are in a unique position regarding Italy. With several million former Italians here, including many U. S. government leaders, this country can appeal to the people inside Italy much more effectively; also can help nurse Italy back to a democratic government without the mistakes of France.

Long under despotism, Italy's transition from the sick-room back to healthy democracy must be careful and perhaps slow. Leading Americans of Italian descent can supervise this transition period, form a trusteeship for the people of (Continued on Page Eight)

Some Varieties of Neuralgia
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
THE FACE is supplied with two nerves. One is mainly motor, that is, it controls the movements of muscles; the other is mainly sensory, that is, it carries sensations of touch, temperature and pain from the skin and other surface structures (for instance, the eye, the teeth and the inside of the nose).
These two nerves are all mixed up and tangled with each other. If the facial nerve would just supply muscles alone, and the trigeminal nerve just bring sensations from the skin of the face alone, it would not be so confusing. But the facial nerve has a sensory branch which supplies the skin over the ear. And the trigeminal nerve has a motor branch which supplies the muscles of mastication. And they both interchange fibers with each other through ganglia, which has always been the despair of the first-year medical student.
Commonest Form of Spasm
So the subject of facial neuralgia is mixed up at the source, and when anyone asks, "What is the cause of my facial neuralgia?" the doctor immediately wants to know, "What kind of facial neuralgia have you got?"
The commonest kind is, of course, what the French called very aptly tic douloureux—painful spasm. It affects one of the branches of the trigeminal nerve—either the one that goes to the forehead, and eyelid, or the one that goes to the skin over the upper jaw and the upper teeth, or the one that goes to the skin over the lower jaw and the lower teeth. It is undoubtedly one of the most excruciatingly painful affections on earth. It comes on in paroxysms which are like terrific electric shocks. It affects older people almost exclusively—it is rare below the age of 40.
Under treatment one of the most important things to remember is a don't. Don't get your teeth pulled out. The pain in the teeth and it seems natural that if they were gone, the pain would go. But it is not so. Even if the teeth are infected or carious and need to come out, this removal will not help the pain of tri-facial neuralgia.

DIET AND HEALTH

Another form of facial neuralgia is caused by affection of another set of nerves—the ones that arise from the sphenopalatine ganglion inside the nose and result in what is known as Sluder's neuralgia, named after the late Dr. Greenfield Sluder, of St. Louis, or lower half headache, because the pain and ache is in the nose and lower half of the face, sometimes going to the skin of the neck and shoulders.

Associated With Sinus
It is nearly always associated with sinus disease of the nose and clearing this up, or relieving the drainage clears up the neuralgia, although in some cases the pain may be so excruciating that the ganglion itself has to be removed.
In the treatment of severe facial neuralgia, inhalation of trichloroethylene often gives relief and the sufferer should remember that the modern neurosurgeon can do wonders in the most stubborn of these cases.

M. W.—I would like to know your opinion of the quantity of milk an adult should drink a day.
Answer: Milk is a good drink for infants and not to such a degree, however, for children. There is no health reason why a person over the age of 15 should drink milk at all. I have not drunk a glass for 35 years. Man is the only animal which habitually chooses to drink milk after the period of lactation has ceased. A cat drinks milk only when it is hungry. A. J. Carlson, the famous physiologist, says every element in milk can be obtained, better fitted for adult, in other foods. Dr. Horace Soper, of St. Louis, says raw milk is unfit for human consumption.

Leave My Heart Alone
ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES
CHAPTER TWENTY
WHEN PAUL asked her to set a wedding date right after the holidays, and accused her of evading this big issue, Karen could think of no good reason for further evasion. It had been two months now since the formal announcement of their engagement. They had intended to set a date some time in the "early winter," as her father had phrased it when he had given out the announcement. The time, however, had slipped by even more rapidly than Karen had anticipated. There had been so many things to make it fly by. Getting the nursery quarters ready, Buffy's arrival, and all the subsequent time she had spent with the little boy to help him get used to his new surroundings, the round of parties added to the other usual social activities now that "the season" was getting into its full swing.
She was just getting used to the idea of being engaged. She would have liked a little more time before having to jump into the next phase of getting married. But she would not want Paul to suspect that she felt that way. She knew how eager he was to have things between them even more definitely settled. There really was no point in a long engagement between two people who had known each other as long as they had, so there seemed no point in not setting that wedding date.
After all, Karen told herself, following along in this line of persuasion, it was not as if being married to Paul would change things too much. They would simply get married and Paul would move over to live in the big house, as had been decided among the three of them, including her father, and they would go on as they were.
Maybe this was a funny way for a girl to feel about being married. But since it would be the first time in her experience Karen could not know that, or if she suspected it she had nothing with which to place such feeling unless again it could be the things one read and heard about marriage. A girl was supposed, according to the movie and song writers' version, to be all fluttery and wide-eyed and, beneath a natural modesty, all eagerness, too. For marriage was the Unknown Land, the Big Adventure, the sum and total of it all—and all that stuff.
Not that Karen thought it all "stuff"; she didn't really, except when applied to herself and Paul. How could one get all worked up over something when it would not, as one had decided, change things much, when one did not want it to? Maybe if you were going to elope with some man who was almost a stranger, as Denise had with her riding master, Raoul, you might be hot and bothered, and icy and thrilled. As a kiss from someone you did not know very well could send chills up and down your spine and continue to haunt you.

But she was not going to think of marriage, either. Her marriage, like her love, was going to be sensible. It was going to be the right marriage from every viewpoint and accepted standard. It jolly well had to be, not just for her sake and Paul's, but because of Jim and yes, because now of Denise's boy, playing here in the sand at Karen's feet as she pondered these thoughts while spending her morning's hour on the beach with the child.
Her love for her sister's boy had grown like wings that expanded each day. It had succeeded in winning a responding affection from the little boy, too, in breaking down those barriers of differences, in removing most of that first shyness and fear. He was such a manly, brave little boy, so very dear.
"No, darling. It's nothing. Just one of our own planes, perhaps Paul's. So you keep right on alerting," Karen had been on the alert to see that quick back-fling of the child's head, dark hair ruffled now, the quick gleam of fear that had flashed into his large eyes. He WAS brave. She still argued that in the too frequent arguments that still arose between herself and Paul over the child for, ridiculous as it was, Paul was jealous of the thought that all the time and time again, Paul was lavished on him. Buffy would conquer this fear, too, given a little more time, more security. She had learned that the child had experienced an air raid, which was why Denise finally had decided to send him home.
"I'm coming over and help with that tunnel." She put her own affairs aside for the more important one at hand. She had promised Paul she would set that date, probably for some time in January, so there was no use mulling it over and trying to wonder if she hadn't better make it February, or even March instead. She got up from the blanket spread under the shadow of the beach house and went to sit beside Buffy, who dug at the water's edge.
"It is to be a trench, not a tunnel," Buffy corrected with grave politeness. As Marty had predicted, this little boy liked to play "war," in spite of having been much too close to that grim reality, as did every other boy anywhere. "It is for our soldiers. To be in readiness when the bad German soldiers come into our very own town and march down the street where I play."
"But that may never happen!" Karen interrupted swiftly. She was willing for him to play in whatever way he chose, but she always tried to steer such play as far away from actuality as possible. She never encouraged the boy to talk about the real war, or to think back to the experiences he had endured. All her efforts were to put all that as far away as possible, thus allaying all fears for all time. "I'm sure it won't, Buffy. Anyway, let's pretend this is a street in New York, the big city where you stayed a few days after your big boat came in. Let's pretend we knocked down all those tall skyscrapers—remember seeing them, dear?—and build this trench right where they were. How would that be?"

It might be a poor substitute, but it was the first to present itself. Of course it could not happen in New York—German soldiers marching into that town, goose-stepping down its streets. Karen shivered, as she always did, at such grim thoughts. There was talk of a lot of unrest and trouble now between the United States and Japan rather than Germany. But it would not come to anything. Even now Japan had sent two representatives to Washington to talk peace with the president. Her father and Paul were still a bit on the anxious side, but men were inclined to take the more pessimistic view.
"That will be all right if it is the way you wish," the child returned, giving her a smile to show he would play her way, although preferring his own, which surely was more exciting since it was bound to happen to his street, as his mother had explained when he had cried when there first had been talk started about sending him over the sea to live with his grandfather.
It was simply inconceivable, Karen thought, busily digging away, too, at this trench that was to protect the people of New York, especially here on this lovely beach, bright with warm sunshine and sweet, salty air. A beach lined with attractive little beach houses, like theirs, and with private clubs, gay with awnings and big sun umbrellas and crowds of men and women and children all laughing and splashing in the inrolling, dancing waves.
Nowhere on earth could there be any place more lovely, more secure, more impenetrable. Thank heaven for that, because of Buffy. This place, no matter what might come, would always remain the same, unchanged.
There she was, back at those changes once more. But being married to Paul would not change anything. Or was that what made it a bit reluctant, because she was afraid it might, just a little, even with Paul in the big house, her dad liking him as if he were his son? Buffy and Paul... well, they got along, they were exceedingly polite to one another, and of course Paul liked the child, even if he were so unreasonably unfair about him sometimes, mostly to tease Karen. "I don't want to go up in Paul's airplane," Buffy said, breaking into Karen's thoughts with Paul's name as she herself had come to him in them.
Then to her amazement the boy burst into a storm of tears.

SMART RAILWAY

"SOME fine day," said the returned traveler, "some really smart railway man will take a good look at the map of the U. S. A. and will design something different. He will probably be a returned army engineer who has gone through himself and has seen other people, not so strong as he, enduring the miseries of changing trains in Chicago just enough times. He will know about clover leaves and how to avoid cities and — being an American army engineer—nothing will be impossible to him.

"So he will sit down to his drafting board and draw a railroad. It will have roughly oval or curvingly triangular cloverleaves at its eastern and western ends. The passenger from Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco or Los Angeles can get into his car at his home town and can choose whether he will get off at Portland, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, or wherever, and he will not have to change cars once. His closed curve at one end will lead gently out to the big straight, and into a closed curve at the other end.

"The Up railway and the Down railway, the Glacier View and the PDQ and all the rest can go their old ways and carry the short-trip traffic. But the new railway will have only modern trains and it will get the through passengers and all their blessings. Because it will never touch Chicago."

"DEAD CAPITALISM"

GENERAL Francisco Franco, the Spanish dictator, tells a big gathering of workmen belonging to his "Falange" party that a time will come when his government will provide "a just distribution of earnings and profits." He defends the right of property, he says, but also proclaims that property has duties to perform. He reminds his listeners of the natural lack of equality among men, resulting from their different gifts and aptitudes.

All this sounds fair and true, but would be more convincing if the Spanish dictator had not risen to power by terror, cruelty and slaughter, even as Hitler and Mussolini did. Free nations, believing in democracy and the natural rights of man, cannot trust this now waning breed of supermen.

"The liberal-capitalist system in Spain is dead forever," proclaims Franco. We shall see about that, as the liberation of enslaved nations proceeds. Spaniards under their harsh dictatorship must look longingly to the greater freedom and opportunity of their blood brethren in Central and South America. Free capitalism may be no more dead than human liberty.

Books, like people, may tell you things that ain't so—but not so often.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON

CHURCHILL STERN

WASHINGTON—Inside fact is that President Roosevelt's fireside radio talk was sent to Churchill in advance for his OK and approval. Churchill's talk before the House of Commons, however, was not sent to Washington in advance.

If it had been, tactful suggestions might have been made to tone down the "seared, scarred and blackened" threats, since U. S. policy is not to be harsh with the Italian people now that they have kicked out Mussolini. Italians, unfortunately, are extremely suspicious of England, think she wants to keep certain Mediterranean islands, Pantelleria, perhaps Sicily.

The man who prompted Roosevelt to rebuff the OWI for calling Victor Emmanuel a "moronic little king" was Admiral Leahy. He hot-footed it over to the White House immediately, warned the President there was no use heaping abuse on the new Italian government until it had a chance to act.

Trouble was that OWI's broadcasts have been operated by a group of well-meaning Italian exiles who are so close to the situation they don't see the over-all, long-range picture.

OVER-ALL COMMITTEE

The above hemming and hawing over Italy points to the importance of the new Italo-American steering committee recently organized in New York under such leading citizens as Judge Ferdinand Pecora of the New York Supreme Court, Judge Felix Forte of Boston, Judge D'Alessandro of Philadelphia, Generoso Pope, editor of Il Progresso, Congressman D'Alessandro of Baltimore, Dr. A. H. Giannini of San Francisco, James Montana of Buffalo and many others.

This committee represents Italo-Americans from all political groups—Democrats and Republicans, some with Fascist leanings before Pearl Harbor, some bitterly anti-Fascist—but all united now to do two things: (1) take Italy out of the war immediately; (2) save Italy from the mistakes of a Giraud-De Gaulle cat-and-dog fight.

When this group met in New York, Dr. Charles Fama, head of the Medical Board, New York City Retirement system, had not spoken for years to Luigi Antonini, head of the Italian-American Labor Council. But they shook hands and pledged to work together to take Italy immediately out of the war and prevent political bickering over Italy's future government, as among the French.

MOVE TOWARD DEMOCRACY

Long-sighted U. S. officials regard this Italo-American move as one of the most broad-gauged steps taken so far toward early peace and toward healing European wounds. They recognize that we are in a unique position regarding Italy. With several million former Italians here, including many U. S. government leaders, this country can appeal to the people inside Italy much more effectively; also can help nurse Italy back to a democratic government without the mistakes of France.

Long under despotism, Italy's transition from the sick-room back to healthy democracy must be careful and perhaps slow. Leading Americans of Italian descent can supervise this transition period, form a trusteeship for the people of (Continued on Page Eight)

Does Japan Now Seek Peace? End of Nazi-Russ Warfare
Between Germans, Russians? Would Benefit Nipponese

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—Reports that Tokyo is trying to get Russia and Germany upon a peace basis continue afloat in Washington. That the Japs are making the attempt is considered a reasonable possibility, though doubts are expressed that the Mikado's advisers are optimistic enough to believe they stand much chance of success at it.

Still, it is recognized that a suspension of Nazi-Soviet hostilities would be enormously to the islanders' advantage. Some observers surmise that perhaps their diplomats have put out a few feelers simply experimentally. If so, according to Joseph C. Grew, formerly our ambassador at Nippon's capital, it is not a real peace that they are angling for, but only a "phony" one.

However, it is accepted as a safe conclusion that they will not attain even the "phony" kind. Herr Hitler, to be sure, from all accounts, would be readily acquiescent.

True, Hitler attacked Comrade Stalin's folk when he did not need to. Josef was neither doing nor saying anything threatening at the time. The United Nations' strategists have been puzzled ever since to account for Adolf's sudden thrust at the Russians, thus unnecessarily lining them up with the anti-Axis people. The general verdict is that it was an error of judgment on his part. Hitler has always been hostile to the Russian regime, anyway. Democrats previously had classed the Reds pretty much with Nazis, Fascists and Falangists, but these three groups all along have had the anti-Communist as well as the anti-democratic complex.

While taking the warpath against the democracies, the Fuehrer presumably deemed it desirable to make his campaign Communistically inclusive, getting the whole thing over in short order, which he obviously thought he and the rest of the Axis could do, if they struck abruptly.

Incidentally, Russia is rich in resources, and the Nazi potentate

unquestionably wanted to grab them.

Finally, in czarist days of yore, Russia had not been much of a fighting power. It had men and courage but it lacked efficient organization. Its record in conflict with Japan was significant of it. It was stronger than the Japs, but they got all the "decisions." They had strategy, determination and a war-like spirit which the czar's folks lacked.

That, clearly, was what Adolf was figuring on. He calculated that one quick, fierce swipe would dispose of the Soviets permanently, leaving the Axis at leisure to attend to the rest of the world comparatively at its convenience.

It proved to be a mis-reckoning. You can say what you like as to Soviet rule, but it has developed military competency with amazing speed since it came into authority. It is no wonder that it proved to be an awful jolt at the Nazi-Fascist program. It was not alone that the strength of it jolted the Axis; the suddenness of it paralyzed them. It has snarled the Axis' activities elsewhere almost more seriously than their own scrapping has done. It has not been so very much maritime, but it has been wonderful terrestrially and aviatorially.

Well, the Nazis clearly bit off more than they could chew on the Russian front. This does not immediately interest the Japs. What THEY need is to distract the United States (and Britain) from the southern Pacific to such an extent that Nippon can scoop in and keep all of eastern Asia, including the Philippines, from the United States' influence, and Australasia from Britain—not to mention Alaska and maybe a western strip of our Yankee continent, besides western Latin America ultimately.

To accomplish that they must preoccupy ourselves, the British and such other friends as we may have, with Germany.

And Germany cannot afford to be preoccupied with us at present, because it already is too much preoccupied with Russia. If Russia would quit, leaving the Nazis to turn our way exclusively, maybe we would be kept too busy in the Occident to interfere with Japan's interests in the Orient.

The nub is—Tokyo seeks to split our world into two hemispheres. If it can, it will collect Russia and Germany into the Oriental faction. But that would be later. Conquest of the Far East would be automatic.

Some Varieties of Neuralgia

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE FACE is supplied with two nerves. One is mainly motor, that is, it controls the movements of muscles; the other is mainly sensory, that is, it carries sensations.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

tions of touch, temperature and pain from the skin and other surface structures (for instance, the eye, the teeth and the inside of the nose).

These two nerves are all mixed up and tangled with each other. If the facial nerve would just supply muscles alone, and the trigeminal nerve just bring sensations from the skin of the face alone, it would not be so confusing. But the facial nerve has a sensory branch which supplies the skin over the ear. And the trigeminal nerve has a motor branch which supplies the muscles of mastication. And they both interchange fibers with each other through ganglia, which has always been the despair of the first-year medical student.

Commonest Form of Spasm
So the subject of facial neuralgia is mixed up at the source, and when anyone asks, "What is the cause of my facial neuralgia?" the doctor immediately wants to know, "What kind of facial neuralgia have you got?"

The commonest kind is, of course, what the French called very aptly tic douloureux—painful spasm. It affects one of the branches of the trigeminal nerve—either the one that goes to the forehead, and eyelid, or the one that goes to the skin over the upper jaw and the upper teeth, or the one that goes to the skin over the lower jaw and the lower teeth. It is undoubtedly one of the most excruciatingly painful afflictions on earth. It comes on in paroxysms which are like terrific electric shocks. It affects older people almost exclusively—it is rare below the age of 40.

Under treatment one of the most important things to remember is a don't. Don't get your teeth pulled out. The pain is in the teeth and it seems natural that if they were gone, the pain would go. But it is not so. Even if the teeth are infected or carious and need to come out, this removal will not help the pain of tri-facial neuralgia.

Another form of facial neuralgia is caused by affection of another set of nerves—the ones that arise from the sphenopalatine ganglion inside the nose and result in what is known as Sluder's neuralgia, named after the late Dr. Greenfield Sluder, of St. Louis, or lower half headache, because the pain and ache is in the nose and lower half of the face, sometimes going to the skin of the neck and shoulders.

Associated With Sinus

It is nearly always associated with sinus disease of the nose and clearing this up, or relieving the drainage clears up the neuralgia, although in some cases the pain may be so excruciating that the ganglion itself has to be removed. In the treatment of severe facial neuralgia, inhalation of trichloroethylene often gives relief and the sufferer should remember that the modern neurosurgeon can do wonders in the most stubborn of these cases.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. W.—I would like to know your opinion of the quantity of milk an adult should drink a day.

Answer: Milk is a good drink for infants and not to such a degree, however, for children. There is no health reason why a person over the age of 15 should drink milk at all. I have not drunk a glass for 35 years. Man is the only animal which habitually chooses to drink milk after the period of lactation has ceased. A cat drinks milk only when it is hungry. A. J. Carlson, the famous physiologist, says every element in milk can be obtained, better fitted for an adult, in other foods. Dr. Horace Soper, of St. Louis, says raw milk is unfit for human consumption.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of paramount importance in effecting an eventful and far reaching influence on life, its pleasures and achievements. Business, finance, place and position, as well as social and romantic adventure, may be wrested from Lady Luck by sagacity, acumen and strenuous application of forces, faculties and resources. Great coups should be in making, as well as large fortunes, good will and happiness. A child born on this day may possess outstanding ability and talents for the manipulation of big deals, in its business, professional and private life. It should attain great heights and happiness in life.

For Sunday, August 1

SUNDAY's horoscope is one of utmost importance fostering and making way for events and issues of major scope and future effect both in private and public life. Great issues may be in the balance, with influential cooperation for ways and means that might effect combinations, mergers and kindred affairs, by clever manipulation of available assets and resources. Probably intuition may be effective or "hunches," but with concentrated, not diffused tactics.

CHAPTER TWENTY

WHEN PAUL asked her to set a wedding date right after the holidays, and accused her of evading this big issue, Karen could think of no good reason for further evasion. It had been two months now since the formal announcement of their engagement. They had intended to set a date, some time in the "early winter," as her father had phrased it when he had given out the announcement. The time, however, had slipped by even more rapidly than Karen had anticipated. There had been so many things to make it fly by. Getting the nursery quarters ready, Buffy's arrival, and all the subsequent time she had spent with the little boy to help him get used to his new surroundings, the round of parties added to the other social activities now that "the season" was getting into its full swing.

She was just getting used to the idea of being engaged. She would have liked a little more time before having to jump into the next phase of getting married. But she would not want Paul to suspect that she felt that way. She knew how eager he was to have things between them even more definitely settled. There really was no point in a long engagement between two people who had known each other as long as they had, so there seemed no point in not setting that wedding date.

After all, Karen told herself, following along in this line of persuasion, it was not as if being married to Paul would change things too much. They would simply get married and Paul would move over to live in the big house, as had been decided among the three of them, including her father, and they would go on as they were.

Maybe this was a funny way for a girl to feel about being married. But since it would be the first time in her experience Karen could not know that, or if she suspected it she had nothing with which to replace such feeling unless again it could be the things one read and heard about marriage. A girl was supposed, according to the movie and song writers' version, to be all fluttery and wide-eyed and beneath a natural modesty, all eagerness, too. For marriage was the Unknown Land, the Big Adventure, the sum and total of it all—and all that stuff.

Not that Karen thought it all "stuff"; she didn't really, except when applied to herself and Paul. How could one get all worked up over something when it would not, as one had decided, change things much, when one did not want it to? Maybe if you were going to elope with some man who was almost a stranger, as Denise had with her riding master, Raoul, you might be hot and bothered, and icy and thrilled. As a kiss from someone you did not know very well could send chills up and down your spine and continue to haunt you. But she was not going to think or dream about THAT, or that kind of marriage, either. Her marriage, like her love, was going to be sensible. It was going to be the right marriage from every viewpoint and accepted standard. It jolly well had to be, not just for her sake and Paul's, but because of Jim and, yes, because now of Denise's boy, playing here in the sand at Karen's feet as she pondered these thoughts while spending her morning's hour on the beach with the child.

Her love for her sister's boy had grown like wings that expanded each day. It had succeeded in winning a responding affection from the little boy, too, in breaking down those barriers of differences, in removing most of that first shyness and fear. He was such a manly, brave little boy, so very dear.

"No, darling. It's nothing. Just one of our own plans, perhaps Paul's. So you keep right on digging." Karen had been on the alert to see that quick back-flip of the child's head, dark hair rumpled now, the quick gleam of fear that had flashed into his large eyes. He WAS brave. She still argued that in the too frequent arguments that still arose between herself and Paul over the child, for ridiculous as it was, Paul was jealous of the boy, resenting all the time and thought Karen lavished on him. Buffy would conquer this fear, too, given a little more time, more security. She had learned that the child had experienced an air raid, which was why Denise finally had decided to send him home.

"I'm coming over and help with the fun!" she put her own affairs aside for the more important one at hand. She had promised Paul she would set that date, probably for some time in January, so there was no use mulling it over and trying to wonder if she hadn't better make it February, or even March instead. She got up from the blanket spread under the shadow of the beach house and went to sit beside Buffy, who dug at the water's edge.

"It is to be a trench, not a tunnel," Buffy corrected with grave politeness. As Marty had predicted, this little boy liked to play "war," in spite of having been much too close to that grim reality, as did every other boy anywhere. "It is for our soldiers. She never encouraged the boy to talk about the real war, or to think back to the experiences he had endured. All her efforts were to put all that as far away as possible, thus allay-

"That will be all right if it is the way you wish," the child returned, giving her a smile to show he would play her way, although preferring his own, which surely was more exciting since it was bound to happen, to his street, as his mother had explained when he had cried when there first had been talk started about sending him over the sea to live with his grandfather.

It was simply inconceivable, Karen thought, busily digging away, too, at this trench that was to protect the people of New York, especially here on this lovely beach, bright with warm sunshine and sweet, salty air. A beach lined with attractive little beach houses, like theirs, and with private clubs, gay with awnings and big sun umbrellas and crowds of men and women and children all laughing and splashing in the inrolling, dancing waves.

Nowhere on earth could there be any place more lovely, more secure, more impenetrable. Thank heaven for that, because of Buffy. This place, no matter what might come, would always remain the same, unchanged.

There she was, back at those changes once more. But being married to Paul would not change anything. Buffy and Paul . . . well, they got along, they were exceedingly polite to one another, and of course Paul liked the child, even if he were so unreasonably unfair about him sometimes, mostly to tease Karen. "I don't want to go up in Paul's airplane," Buffy said, breaking into Karen's thoughts with Paul's name as she herself had come to him in them.

Then to her amazement the boy burst into a storm of tears.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Harvesting Herbs from Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

VICTORY gardeners will find that herb leaves can be used green in many ways during their growing season. For winter use herbs are dried and stored. The leaves and tender tips are used for this purpose.

American housewives used to hang a bunch of herbs from the kitchen rafters or from a nail driven into the side of a shed wall, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. In either case, heat from a wood stove, usually the kitchen stove, was depended upon to dry the herbs. This in itself was a decorative method, but the dust that collected upon them did not improve the taste of the herbs.

Today the preferred method is to spread the leaves on a tray, as

God Delivers His People

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Exodus 5-12.

By Alfred J. Buescher

When Aaron and Moses went to Pharaoh the first time and asked him to let the children of Israel go, he refused, and said he would make life harder for them.

Henceforth the Israelites were given no more straw with which to make bricks, but were told to get it themselves, and if they failed they were to be beaten.

The officers of the Hebrews came then to Moses and Aaron and told them of their hardships, complaining that since they went to Pharaoh life had become harder.

Then Moses went to the Lord and told Him of the Israelites' troubles, and the Lord promised to make the Pharaoh let them go. (Golden Text—Psalm 50:15)

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Harvesting Herbs from Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

VICTORY gardeners will find that herb leaves can be used green in many ways during their growing season. For winter use herbs are dried and stored. The leaves and tender tips are used for this purpose.

American housewives used to hang a bunch of herbs from the kitchen rafters or from a nail driven into the side of a shed wall, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. In either case, heat from a wood stove, usually the kitchen stove, was depended upon to dry the herbs. This in itself was a decorative method, but the dust that collected upon them did not improve the taste of the herbs.

Today the preferred method is to spread the leaves on a tray, as illustrated in the Garden-Graph, cover them with a cheesecloth (for sanitation) and let them dry indoors.

The tray can be the four sides of a garden flat with the bottom covered with screening instead of wood and when filled with herb leaves it should be propped up so that the air can circulate. If the tray is well shaken each morning all the leaves are sure to get air. After permitting the leaves to dry for two or three days, the herbs are placed in mason jars or any close-topped container.

Certain herbs such as parsley, sweet basil, sweet marjoram and chives can be potted and kept growing in the house all winter, providing the pots are placed where they will get sun.

BRIEF RADIO NOTES

Major Bowes is giving up his amateur unit sideline with all shows on the road being withdrawn as of August 12. Fred Allen may still do a film this Fall though he nixed a story chosen for him. Jack Benny and his USO troupe have arrived safely in the Middle East. The comedian and his group of entertainers may be the first to follow the Yanks into Sicily. If "The Aldrich Family" switches to CBS on Friday nights this Fall, that network will be offering four consecutive half-hours of dramatic dialog with two of them devoted to juvenile antics. MGM has nixed the deal for Judy Garland to appear on her own Thursday night show. Tommy Riggs' program will go off the air when Bob Burns returns from his current 13-week vacation. Guest soloists on the "Telephone Hour" are set through next April 17 and will include, among others, such names as Josef Hoffmann, Grace Moore, Gladys Swarthout, Nelson Eddy, Lily Pons and Jascha Heifetz. The Blue network is prepared to accept recorded versions of evening network commercial shows for broadcast on the Blue's daytime schedule. CBS will now allow medicinal manufacturers to sponsor newscasts or commentary programs. Maestro Johnny Galt was complaining about current-day conversations. Said he: "When people aren't beefing about the gas, they're gassing about the beef!" Victor Borge comments that it shouldn't be hard for Mussolini to get used to his new position. "He's used to being out on a balcony," says Borge, "and now he's out on a limb!"

Circleville to Take Another Slap At Axis Nations Monday.

CITIZENS URGED TO CONTRIBUTE TO SCRAP DRIVE

City Trucks To Pick Up Material Placed In Front Of Homes

OLD TIN CANS NEEDED

Paper Will Be Accepted Along With Metal Of All Kinds

Circleville folk will be given another opportunity Monday to take a slap at the axis by contributing freely to the August scrap drive, planned by the Circleville salvage committee working in cooperation with the city service department headed by Clarence Helvering.

The campaign will be centered in a single day's activity, service department trucks being sent through the streets of Circleville from early morning until all salvage material is cleared from the curbsings.

Dan McClain, chairman of the local salvage committee, pointed out Saturday that scrap of almost all kinds is being sought by Uncle Sam's collectors.

Tin Cans Needed

"However," the salvage chairman said, "state salvage officials are stressing the need for more tin cans. We are putting tin cans first on our salvage collection schedule this month because they are severely needed. Cans put on the streets must be properly cleaned and crushed or service department men will not take them."

Mr. McClain pointed out that labels must be removed, the cans washed, the ends knocked out and the cans crushed before salvage collectors will pick them up. The local salvage committee hopes to be able to send a railroad car filled with tin cans to the collection center within the next few weeks.

In addition to the tin can collection, the city trucks will be looking for metals of all kinds, paper, magazines, corrugated paper and other similar materials.

Need for metals of all types is being stressed.

Big Results Expected

Mr. McClain said Saturday that there should be a fairly good supply of salvagable materials in Circleville since there has been no scrap collection here for two months. The last drive was staged in June when city trucks made the rounds. This campaign was a success, McClain said several tons of salvage materials were collected then.

Housewives are urged to put their salvage materials on the curbsings early Monday so trucks will be able to pick them up.

While the salvage campaign in the rural area has slowed down considerably because of the press of farm work, junk dealers are engaging in a systematic collection program that is covering the county. Several tons of scrap materials are being collected each week.

The first six months of 1943 put 1,400 tons of scrap materials into Uncle Sam's supply piles from Pickaway county. Mr. McClain said that the goal of 1,800 tons was not reached, but that much material gathered in rural areas and remaining there now is being picked up and taken to scrap collection centers.

B and C Card Holders May Lose Ration If Not Sharing Car Rides

Circleville and Pickaway county motorists who are driving their cars now with B and C gasoline ration permits were warned Saturday by the regional Office of Price Administration officials in Cleveland that those who have failed to take the share-the-ride program seriously by not carrying full loads of passengers to work, whenever possible, may face loss of their supplemental rations.

The OPA pledged a more strict scrutiny in renewing B and C ration books.

The government agency said local War Price and Rationing boards are being told to "clamp down because many persons have failed to take the share-the-ride program seriously and because many persons who obtained supplemental rations in lieu of alternate means of travel are using alternate means and consuming their gasoline for pleasure."

The Cleveland OPA office declared that issuance of tires to B and C ration holders may also be tightened unless they can show that they are carrying other workers to plants and factories where they are employed.

Questions which the local boards have been installed to check carefully in reviewing B and C supplemental rations include:

Persons riding with others and yet having supplemental rations themselves;

Persons in areas where the OPA

CONSERVATIVE FDR

Ex-secretary of the Navy Joseph Daniels, one of the few men who doesn't hesitate to give bare-knuckled advice to his one-time assistant, F. D. Roosevelt, was entertaining at dinner in the American Embassy in Mexico City several years ago. It was during Roosevelt's first term when he was passing all sorts of New Deal reforms, and one of Daniels' guests—from Wall Street—launched a tirade against the President.

"Do you approve of all the policies which your friend Roosevelt is putting over on the country?" he asked.

"I do not," replied Ambassador Daniels.

"I am glad," said the New Yorker, "that you cannot stand for this radicalism."

"What I object to in President Roosevelt," shot back Daniels, "is that he is too conservative."

The New Yorker gasped. "You are the only man I know who thinks he is too conservative," he said. "We in New York think his radicalism will ruin the country."

"On the other hand," smiled Daniels, "there are about fifteen million of us who think he is too conservative and hope he will go further, uproot all monopoly, and do it soon."

Note: The other day this ten-year old conversation was recalled to Ambassador Daniels, now busy editing his newspaper in Raleigh, N. C. "I still think," he remarked, "that President Roosevelt is too conservative."

HONORS FOR WORKMEN

The Office of War Information is arranging a deluxe program for next Labor Day, hailing the contribution of American workmen to the drive for victory. "Producing for Attack" will be the theme of the program, and it will include inspirational broadcasts by President Roosevelt and other top-ranking war leaders.

However, this isn't the only labor show on the OWI schedule this year. Another special celebration for Labor, to be known as "On to Victory" day also will be observed within the next two months.

It was conceived by Major Paul Hines, chief of the labor branch of the Fourth Service Command at Atlanta, Ga., and promoted by Hervey Allen, author of "Anthony Adverse."

All war plants will be asked to declare an "hour off" on "On to Victory" day, at which time special "War Merit" emblems will be awarded.

Climaxing the "On to Victory" programs will be a nationwide broadcast in the evening—according to OWI plans—featuring such speakers as President Roosevelt, Winston Churchill, Generals MacArthur, Eisenhower and Doolittle and Admirals King and Halsey. Joseph Stalin and General Chiang Kai-shek of China also may be invited to take part. All the speakers will have a special message for American labor.

The evening broadcast will conclude with the sounding of taps from the steps of the Nation's Capitol, in memory of our war dead, and an answering taps by

AWOL WAC HELD AT LOCKBOURNE AIR BASE

Corporal Mary L. Hammond, 39, of Columbus, who told Sheriff Charles Radcliff she had decided to go AWOL rather than continue grubbing stumps at Camp Craig, Ala., is being held at Lockbourne army air base, probably until she is discharged from the Women's Army Corps.

Under new WAC rules every member of the organization will be given a chance to reenlist September 1 when the WAAC officially becomes the WAC, by dropping the word "auxiliary" from the title. Since Corporal Hammond does not wish to remain in the women's army she will be released, it is understood.

Sheriff Radcliff took the former Columbus woman into custody on a Scioto township farm where she was canning fruits. She admitted being AWOL.

When the sheriff took her to Fort Hayes, Columbus, as instructed, the captain of the guard was put in a dilemma concerning her custody. He finally housed her in a wing of the hospital pending further arrangements.

Miss Hammond, who is a former Curtis-Wright Corporation employee, was transferred to Lockbourne where she is in custody of the post headquarters unit.

LOCKBOURNE GETS NEW PERSONNEL OFFICER

Captain Charles E. Lynch of Syracuse, N. Y. army air base has been appointed as personnel officer at the Lockbourne army air base. Captain Lynch succeeds Lieutenant John U. Nagle, who will remain as assistant personnel director.

Announcement of the change was made by Colonel A. C. Foulk, base commander, who said that Captain Lynch, who is 39, had also served at Patterson field, Fairfield, where he had commanded the headquarters and headquarters squadron.

PATRICK RESIGNS

Charles M. Patrick, of Columbus, employed two weeks ago to head the schools of Mount Sterling, has resigned to become principal of Mariemont high school at Cincinnati. Mr. Patrick served as principal of Canal Winchester high school last year. His resignation leaves Mount Sterling searching for a new administrator.

CITIZENS URGED TO CONTRIBUTE TO SCRAP DRIVE

City Trucks To Pick Up Material Placed In Front Of Homes

OLD TIN CANS NEEDED

Paper Will Be Accepted Along With Metal Of All Kinds

Circleville folk will be given another opportunity Monday to take a slap at the axis by contributing freely to the August scrap drive, planned by the Circleville salvage committee working in cooperation with the city service department headed by Clarence Helvering.

The campaign will be centered in a single day's activity, service department trucks being sent through the streets of Circleville from early morning until all salvage material is cleared from the curbs.

Dan McClain, chairman of the local salvage committee, pointed out Saturday that scrap of almost all kinds is being sought by Uncle Sam's collectors.

Tin Cans Needed

"However," the salvage chairman said, "state salvage officials are stressing the need for more tin cans. We are putting tin cans first on our salvage collection schedule this month because they are severely needed. Cans put on the streets must be properly cleaned and crushed or service department men will not take them."

Mr. McClain pointed out that labels must be removed, the cans washed, the ends knocked out and the cans crushed before salvage collectors will pick them up. The local salvage committee hopes to be able to send a railroad car filled with tin cans to the collection center within the next few weeks.

In addition to the tin can collection, the city trucks will be looking for metals of all kinds, paper, magazines, corrugated paper and other similar materials.

Need for metals of all types is being stressed.

Big Results Expected

Mr. McClain said Saturday that there should be a fairly good supply of salvagable materials in Circleville since there has been no scrap collection here for two months. The last drive was staged in June when city trucks made the rounds. This campaign was a success, McClain said several tons of salvage materials were collected then.

Housewives are urged to put their salvage materials on the curbs early Monday so trucks will be able to pick them up.

While the salvage campaign in the rural area has slowed down considerably because of the press of farm work, junk dealers are engaging in a systematic collection program that is covering the county. Several tons of scrap materials are being collected each week.

The first six months of 1943 put 1,400 tons of scrap materials into Uncle Sam's supply piles from Pickaway county. Mr. McClain said that the goal of 1,800 tons was not reached, but that much material gathered in rural areas and remaining there now is being picked up and taken to scrap collection centers.

B and C Card Holders May Lose Ration If Not Sharing Car Rides

Circleville and Pickaway county motorists who are driving their cars now with B and C gasoline ration permits were warned Saturday by the regional Office of Price Administration officials in Cleveland that those who have failed to take the share-the-ride program seriously by not carrying full loads of passengers to work, whenever possible, may face loss of their supplemental rations.

The OPA pledged a more strict scrutiny in renewing B and C ration books.

The government agency said local War Price and Rationing boards are being told to "clamp down because many persons have failed to take the share-the-ride programs seriously and because many persons who obtained supplemental rations in lieu of alternate means of travel are using alternate means and consuming their gasoline for pleasure."

The Cleveland OPA office declared that issuance of tires to B and C ration holders may also be tightened unless they can show that they are carrying other workers to plants and factories where they are employed.

Questions which the local boards have been installed to check carefully in reviewing B and C supplemental rations include:

Persons riding with others and yet having supplemental rations themselves;

Persons in areas where the OCP

CONSERVATIVE FDR

Ex-Secretary of the Navy Joseph Daniels, one of the few men who doesn't hesitate to give bare-knuckled advice to his one-time assistant, F. D. Roosevelt, was entertaining at dinner in the American Embassy in Mexico City several years ago. It was during Roosevelt's first term when he was passing all sorts of New Deal reforms, and one of Daniels' guests—from Wall Street—launched a tirade against the President.

"Do you approve of all the policies which your friend Roosevelt is putting over on the country?" he asked.

"I do not," replied Ambassador Daniels.

"I am glad," said the New Yorker, "that you cannot stand for this radicalism."

"What I object to in President Roosevelt," shot back Daniels, "is that he is too conservative."

The New Yorker gasped. "You are the only man I know who thinks he is too conservative," he said. "We in New York think his radicalism will ruin the country."

"On the other hand," smiled Daniels, "there are about fifteen million of us who think he is too conservative and hope he will go further, uproot all monopoly, and do it soon."

Note: The other day this ten-year old conversation was recalled to Ambassador Daniels, now busy editing his newspaper in Raleigh, N. C. "I still think," he remarked, "that President Roosevelt is too conservative."

HONORS FOR WORKMEN

The Office of War Information is arranging a deluxe program for next Labor Day, hailing the contribution of American workmen to the drive for victory. "Producing for Attack" will be the theme of the program, and it will include inspirational broadcasts by President Roosevelt and other top-ranking war leaders.

However, this isn't the only labor show on the OWI schedule this year. Another special celebration for Labor, to be known as "On to Victory" day also will be observed within the next two months.

It was conceived by Major Paul Hines, chief of the labor branch of the Fourth Service Command at Atlanta, Ga., and promoted by Hervey Allen, author of "Anthony Adverse."

All war plants will be asked to declare an "hour off" on "On to Victory" day, at which time special "War Merit" emblems will be awarded.

Climaxing the "On to Victory" programs will be a nationwide broadcast in the evening—according to OWI plans—featuring such speakers as President Roosevelt, Winston Churchill, Generals MacArthur, Eisenhower and Doolittle and Admirals King and Halsey. Joseph Stalin and General Chiang Kai-shek of China also may be invited to take part. All the speakers will have a special message for American labor.

The evening broadcast will conclude with the sounding of taps from the steps of the Nation's Capitol, in memory of our war dead, and an answering taps by
